The Coupon Question.

Some of our contemporaries seem to think that the debt question is settled. Surely they do not read the daily quotations of the prices of coupons. Why are coupons of 1883 selling for over finally? We hear, too, every 'day, of the purchase of coupons by persons intending to use them in paying their

All this is very unpatriotic, but it cannot be stopped unless the whole community will unite in the refusal to purchase coupons. Both parties have resolved that they will make the RIDDLEBERGER settlement a finality, and to this end the Democratic ever additional legislation may be needed to secure that object.

Those persons are short-sighted as well as unpatriotic who pay their taxes | thoughts in English. in coupons. It is absolutely certain that the tax-payers of Virginia have the matter entirely in their own hands. It is for them to say whether the RIDDLE-BERGER settlement shall be a final one or not. It is for them to say whether Virginia shall or shall not be relieved from the mountain of debt-thirty, forty, fifty millions-which those coupons represent. It is for them to say whether the State is to go unshackled in the future or to be the foot-ball of the world.

Let us say once more that there is no law that requires any man to pay his taxes in coupons. Whoever does so does it of his own free will and accord. He voluntarily hands over to his mother State a stone when she asks him for bread. He knowingly and wilfully pays her in coupons, when he also knows that these coupons cannot be used in paying the expenses of the State government, nor in employing men and courts to protect his fireside, he sees her suffering for money. The embalmed. courts have gone no further than to say that any tax-payer may, if he chooses, satisfy his debt to the State by using coupons. It is you, and not the courts, that put them into the State Treasury.

Cannot the State compel her collecting officers to refuse to receive cou-Suppose the State of Virginia shall sue a collector for ten thousand dollars of money that he owes her in place of the ten thousand dollars of face value of treasury? Can he plead that the United States courts have commanded him to receive coupons for taxes due the State of Virginia? Why, the Constitution of the United States provides that Virginia cannot be sued in any Federal court. That plea wouldn't hold water. Will Judge BOND issue a writ of probibition, ordering the State court not to proceed in a case in which the Commonwealth of Virginia is the plaintiff? Hardly. There are not many things that he would not do to embarrass the people of this State; but he must draw the line somewhere. As we suggested yesterday, the collecting officers can resign as soon as Judge BOND issues a mandamus ordering them to receive coupons for taxes. What will he do then? A new suit will have to be brought against every new incumbent of the collector's office.

and a new mandamus be issued to him. There will be men in the Legislature about to assemble who will study out the debt problem. It is a pity that it should be necessary; but so it is. One thing that body can do, and this is to make all unpaid taxes a lien upon the real estate of the unpatriotic taxpayer who stuffs the treasury with coupons, and to provide by law that all taxes paid in coupons shall be "un-zens at an Early Honr in the Morning. The Staunton Vindicator gives the following in regard to the defalcation of Treasurer Carroll, of that city, and the excitement it occasioned : Saturday morning about 3 o'clock many doors in Staunton resounded with hasty knocks. Newton Argenbright, clerk of the Corporation Court; Joseph B. Woodward, deputy clerk of the County Court; Judge Hugh W. Shef-fey, president of the Augusta National Bank; W. P. Tams, cashier of the same bank; and H. M. McIlhany, secretary of the Staunton Life-Insurance Company, were aroused that cold, wintry morning to record legal documents or have legal notices served on them by Sergeant W. D. Runnels and Deputy-Sheriff Logan Turner, which informed the gentlemen named, as well as the could read it by lamp-light, that the State of Virginia attached for debt whatever property of John M. Carroll was under their control. The cause of the untimely arousing was the fact that Judge William A. Hudson, counsel for M. P. Funkhouser, surety, JOHN BUNYAN was not richer in illus- had just stepped off the belated train from Richmond, and had in his pocket attachments issued from the Circuit Court of that city against the property of John M. Carroll as a non-resident debtor. It appears that Judge Hudson, who is himself one of the sureties on ex-Treasurer Carroll's State bond, became satisfied from his investigations up to Thursday afternoon last the missing treasurer was a for the Democrats and Republicans to defaulter. He jumped on the unite for the purpose of accomplishing 3:40 express train and started Richmond, in the Circuit Court of which city such suits can only be brought. On reaching there he found Auditor Marye and Attorney-General Blair both out of town. The next morning he found the Auditor at his office and stated the facts within his knowledge, and, as one of the sureties, asked for proceedings by the State to protect itself. The Auditor, in the Attorney-General's absence, procured another attorney, and on that day) brought two suits on behalf of the Commonwealth against Carroll—one for $3,356.24 due on his account up to July 1st last, and the other for $775.29 since due. Judge Hudson got the lis pendens and the writs, and that night occurred and it looked as if the train could not arrive in Staunton till noon next day, and he commenced negotiations for a special locomotive, as it was sent treasurer's property. The train, however, get free sooner than expect-ed, though two hours late, and arrived Hudson then proceeded the same night to arouse the law officers and by attachment protect the interest of his client. Later in the day the city authorities also attached the property. On Monday last, before a called meeting of the City Council, an expert acountant told the story of the reasons that lay at the bottom of the missing treasurer's flight. All the members of the Council except Captain F. B. Berkeley were present. Mr. G. G. Gooch, chairman of the Finance Committee, said that by direction of the Council the committee had employed an expert to look into the accounts of ex-Treasurer Carroll, Mr. Congress." He thinks he could give John M. Kinney, and as that gentleman was now present he would ask him to state what had been developed by his investigation so far. Mr. Kinney said that his examinawhen Treasurer Carroll settled last with the city he put down as due by him to the city $23,634.19. He found that the Treasurer, when he left September 24th, left to his credit in the National Valley Bank $15,408. In his safe had been found checks, endorsed by himself as City Treasurer, amounting to $1,581. all of which were good save one of $58 given by C. A. Richardson. All these were placed to his credit. With these credits the books of Mr. Carroll from May 1st showed that he owed the city $81,706,12, and the city owed him $76,823.43, leaving a deticit in his accounts of $4,882.69. This was as Failed." We did not know that vet another deficit. It is the custom of the treasurer to turn over, with 5 per cent. added, to the deputy treasurer, E. M. Cushing, all the taxes upon which half had been called and nothing paid. Mr. Carroll's books claimed that he turned over to Mr. Cushing $18,855.79 of tax-tickets and 21,990.27. The tickets produced by Mr. Cushing to Mr. Kinney footed up $14.216 of tax-tickets and $2,667 of water-tickets-total, $16,883, leaving another deficit of $5,107,27. Major Elder: Have you analyzed the items Mr. Carroll gave as making up the $23,684 he owed the city at the May settlement?

Major Elder: Mr. Carroll and his surety are undoubtedly liable for those tax-tickets which are not uncollectable. Their liability is to the city, and if there is any discrepancy in the accounts between Mr. Cushing and Carroll that will have to be adjusted between them. Mr. Carroll charges up $21,000 of tax-tickets to Mr. Cushing, but Mr. Car-roll's sureties must account to city for them unless it can be shown that Mr. Carroll made a mistake in charging Mr. Cushing with that amount of tickets. If Mr. Cushing produces the tickets, well and good; but in any other event Carroll's security is

Mr. Burke : Mr. Carroll's representative can attend to the settlement. Captain Marquis: Mr. Carroll has left no representative. Mr. Kinney: As the matter no stands the business of the office is at a standstill. There are $8,000 of (remaining half) tax tickets-$15,000 the National Valley bank and $1,500 of endorsed checks ready to be turned over to Mr. Hoge. Mr. Carroll's legal representative ought to receive a receipt for these when they are turned over. Any other credits to Mr. Carroll can now only be in the tickets which he says be turned over to Mr. Cushing. Mr. Cushing said to me that he does not recognize the Council committee as the proper authority to settle with him, and Carroll or Carroll's representative is the proper person for him to settle with. I don't know what authority Mr. Marquis has as Mr. Carroll's representative. Captain Marquis: I have no legal authority whatever to settle for him. I was appointed by Mr. Carroll's family to look after his interests, but I have no authority to settle for him.

Carroll can make a settlement of his affairs that would be recognized by the law and by this Ceuncil.

A Murderous Assault-Au Angry Negro Al most Kills His Wife with an Axe-Two Mor Incendiary Fires-The Vacant Judgeships-Stenmer Sunk. Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch. PETERSBURG, VA., Nov. 20, 1885.

At a late hour last night George Clarke, a negro, committed a murder ous assault upon his wife, Anna Clarke which, beyond question, will result in her death. The couple lived in a kitchen the back premises of a family of Market street, near Tabb, and it been noticed time and again that they were not always on the most pleasant terms. The ladies of the house fre quently heard the man quarrel-ling with his wife, and were times apprehensive of trouble Last night they heard Clarke and his wife quarrelling. No one knew, however, how the quarrel originated or how it culminated until some time later. When Clarke came out from his room he was asked as to the cause of the disturbance. He replied that his aches, but that some women were with Suspecting that something was wrong, the ladies sent at once for a police officer to investigate the matter The officers, on making search, found Anna Clarke alone, and weltering in her blood on the floor. He has been employed for a long time on the Norfolk and Western railroad, and has several times been punished in our courts for

The first occurred about 10 o'clock, destroying a large frame building owned by the Virginia and Carolina Railroad Company, formerly used to confine convicts employed at work on the road. This building was located on the line of the road near Lafayette street, and was in close proximity to the one set on fire and burned two or three nights ago. Loss small, with no insurance. SCHAEFER WINS A GAME.

He Minkes Big Runs Just When They Are Needed. A Chicago special of Thursday says : Jacob Schaefer won his first game in the balk tournament this evening, and 2,500 persons saw a brilliant and interesting contest lasting two hours and fifty minutes and running through 26 innings. Schaefer had suffered among the betting men to-day, his oppo- and, after threatening her with instant nent. Vignaux, having the call. outlook early in the game justified the wisdom of the pool-rooms. At the end of the eighth inning Schaefer had made only 8 points, while Vignaux had captured 139. But in the succeeding innings Schaefer's average was nearly 33, and his work was as interesting as it was dazzling. The enthusiasm for Schaefer was unbounded. Vignaux | she made the slightest outery, left. played a stubborn game all the way through, but the balls ran very hard for him toward the last.

Schaefer won the bank and counted very prettily from the spot, but took his seat immediately thereafter upon an attempt at an easy carrom. naux followed with 2, and Schaefer got only a goose-egg out of his half of the second inning. Another attempt and Schaefer caught a single button, following it up with another goose-egg in the fourth inning. The next inning yielded him 4, and the next double that number. People began to yawn, and now and then a derisive groan broke out. There was a look of unutterable disgust on the faces of the "Wizard's" friends when he skipped through the seventh and eighth innings with a goose-egg in each. Vignaux finished the eighth inning with a run of 55, and Schaefer ran his along the north rail, and the crowd forgot its disgust and cheered. set his teeth and was evidently very mad. Then he began to play as the people who paid to see the tournament expected him to play. There were no very difficult shots, but all were so rapidly executed it was difficult to follow the balls. "Jake's going to play after all," said, in an undertone, a man on the stage. The "Wizard's" cue slipped and he missed an easy carrom after having added 74 points to his string. There was wild applause at But while Schaefer was fooling away with the balls Vignaux had been playing in dead earnest, scoring every ning and stopping with singles but three times. His execution was capital and his estimate of distances and force superior to that shown before in the tournament. One of his shots, a four-cushion "kiss," made with the balls originally resting in the northwest corner along the west rail, was so brilliant in execution as to call down the house in one long yell of admiration. At the end of the ninth inning the score stood—Vignaux, 194; Schaefer, 82.

Although Schaefer had braced up in the ninth inning, he fell down immediately after, scoring only 2 points and adding as many goose eggs to his nest. Vignaux, however, had just begun to do his playing, following his run of 55 in the ninth inning with consecutive runs of 63, 57 and 13, and he was ever. Schaefer had the balls in good position in the twelfth inning, and started off on a run that brought people out of their seats. When he stopped at 97 a sigh of regret went up from the crowd of spectators, which was with Schaefer all the evening. The score

The Frenchman widened the difference by adding 29 buttons to his string. Then the "Wizard," with a surpri sing open table shot, gathered the balls over in the northeast corner, and started nament. Click by click, so faintly that they could hardly be heard, the balls rolled up the points. The Frenchman rose from his seat and hovered around his opponent, looking ready to jump if the slightest miss were made. But there was no miss, and the score went The balls rolled into the the table, and there Schaefer did some of the most brilliant open-table masse work of the evening. There was silence when 95 was called and a great cheer when the 100 mark was touched. Shaefer ran the file across his cue-tip and half smiled as the crowd outside set up a yell when his score was bulletined on the screen. Then he went to work, and the crowd kept up a contin nous cheer. The big Frenchman walked nervously around the table until 152 was counted, and then Shaefer sat down on a cross-table shot.

Vignaux tried his hand, but the balls would not answer to his touch, and he retired with 1 and then took a goose egg. Three more small singles were all that he could catch in the next five innings, but his run of 74 in the nine teenth lifted him a big notch. But Schaefer in the mean time had been doing good work. In the seventeenth and eighteenth innings he jumped in for runs of 86 and 37, and in the twentieth inning made a run of 110 points. Vignaux's little run of 36 came along too late, although Schaefer added four goose eggs to his store in the succeeding innings. The Frenchman knew that the game belonged to his oppo-nent and weakened. Schaefer buckled to in the twenty-fifth inning, and needed only 12 more to go out. These he picked up in the next inning and the game was his.

The following is the score Schaefer—1, 0, 1, 0, 4, 2, 0, 0, 74, 0, 2, 0, 97, 152, 7, 2, 86, 37, 3, 110, 0, 0, Vignaux-2, 37, 10, 14, 2, 14, 1, 59,

Two Men Compel a Lady to Surrender Valuable Family Papers.

A Cleveland (O.) special says: Facts upon Mrs. Margaret Gaw, a handsome lady, who resides alone at No. 145 Wilson avenue, her husband, an officer in the late war, being an inmate of the Newburg asylum. This morning she called upon the superintendent of police and made the following statement: She said she was alone Wednesday night, when, about 8 o'clock. two men called and inquired if she them that she had, when they asked to see them. She invited them into the house, and proceeding toward the rear of the building, was about to conduct them into the room, the only one she had to rent. As she stepped across the threshold of the parlor the men suddenly seized her, and, throwing a towel over her face, completely blindfolded her, and also prevented her crying for assistance. They demanded that she tell them where her husband's pension papers were, and also the papers appointing her guardian of her hand. The men, after gaining posses sion of the papers, sat her in a chair death if she refused, made he name two or three times. She was unable to see, being blindfolded and al most stifled, so that it was necessary for one of the men to guide her arm while she was signing. The woman by this time was half dead from fright. She was then tied to the chair, and the men, after again threatening her life if

The woman succeeded in freeing her hands and tearing the towel from her face. It was 9 o'clock when she was able to call for assistance. She was so prostrated that she was unable to notify the pelice authorities until this morning. She could give no reason for the assault. For some time she had had trouble with a brother regarding the guardianship of her husband, and she thought that perhaps one of the papers she signed was a renunciation of her guardianship rights. After visiting the police superintendent she went direct to the probate judge's office and related that she had not renounced any claims or rights affecting her has

The outrage is one of the boldest ever perpetrated in this city. Mrs. is about fifty-five years of age, and for a number of years held a prom inent clerkship in the Post-Office De cue through his fingers and looked down on the ugly lay of the balls which the most fashionable places in the city, and most fashionable places in the city, and Frenchman had left him. Then the cue shot out and counted. The balls ranged the fact that persons occupied suits of rooms directly over her; but the whole affair was conducted so noiselessly that not a sound was heard. Detectives are now hunting up the case. As yet they have discovered no clue. No other valuables were taken, although there were money and jewels within reach of
